Back-to-School Job Gains Drive Arizona's Economy in August While Unemployment Rate Decreases

Arizona's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate was 4.6 percent in August, a slight decrease from 4.9 percent in July. Around the state, Maricopa and Mohave counties had the lowest adjusted unemployment rates in August at 3.9 percent, while Yuma County had the highest at 14.4 percent. Nationally, the jobless rate for August was 4.9 percent, essentially the same as the 5.0 percent in July.

Arizona had a greater than ten year average gain of 36,000 nonfarm jobs in August. These gains were the strongest in the industries of government, educational and health services, professional and business services, construction, and financial activities. Most industry groups reported an increase in employment for August. The only exceptions were a slight decrease in information and no change in natural resources and mining. Since August 2004, the state has added 97,500 jobs, representing an over-the-year rate of 4.1 percent.

The increases in government and educational and health care services were mostly seasonal as a result of the return of faculty and staff to educational institutions to begin the new academic year in August. Public education registered a gain of 24,900 jobs, while private educational services had an increase of 3,300 jobs.

Government gained 22,700 jobs, with 24,900 jobs added in state and local government education. The non-education and unreported parts of state and local government had slight seasonally related losses, while the federal government had a gain (+700).

Educational and health services had the largest job gains in the private sector with an increase of 5,300 jobs. Increases in other sectors besides private educational services included health care (+1,000) and social assistance (+1,000).

Professional and business services had an increase of 1,800 jobs. Gains were recorded in most sectors with professional, scientific and technical services (+500) reporting the largest increase.

Strong growth in construction continued with an increase of 1,700 jobs. Most sectors grew, with the exception of a loss of 200 jobs in heavy and civil engineering construction.

Financial activities reported a greater than ten year average increase of 1,200 jobs. These healthy gains were present in most sectors, with credit intermediation having the largest increase (+700). Securities and commodity contracts was the only exception with no reported change in employment levels.

Leisure and hospitality had a ten year average increase of 1,100 jobs. A typical seasonal pattern occurred in August with gains in food services (+1,700) and losses in arts, entertainment and recreation (-200) and accommodation (-400).

Trade, transportation and utilities had a less than ten year average gain of 1,000 jobs for August. While gains in trade were less than the ten year average (+700), increases in transportation, warehousing and utilities were on par with the ten year average (+300). Retail trade had an increase of 700 jobs, while wholesale trade reported no change. The strongest retail gains were reported in the sectors of motor vehicles (+400), furniture and home furnishings (+300) and food and beverage stores (+300). General merchandise had the greatest reported losses with a decrease of 900 jobs. In the sectors of transportation, warehousing and utilities, air transportation reported a slight decrease (-100), while utilities and truck transportation had no change in employment.

Other services reported a strong gain for the second consecutive month with an increase 1,000 jobs in August.

Manufacturing had good month for August, with both over-the-month (+300) and over-the-year increases (+400). Gains were reported in most durable goods manufacturing sectors including computer and electronic parts (+100) and aerospace products and parts (+300). The fabricated metals sector was the exception in durable goods with no reported change. Non-durable goods manufacturing also recorded no over-the-month change in employment for August.

Natural resources and mining was flat for the month of August.

Information was the only major industry group to report a loss of jobs (-100) in August. These losses were concentrated primarily in publishing (-100). However, telecommunications had an over-the-month increase (+100) for the first time since May.

In conclusion, August was a good month for the Arizona economy with a strong gain of 36,000 nonfarm jobs and with increases in most industry groups. The only exception was the reported losses in information. It is important to point out that any effects of Hurricane Katrina were not present in the August employment figures because the employment surveys were conducted before the storm made landfall.
